Student Comments:

- I enjoyed this class. While I failed to do well on tests, I learned a lot and got out of this class.
- Prof Taewon was incredible at making sure we were all engaged with the lesson, loved his style of teaching.
- I did not use the supplemental textbook materials as much, but used our teacher's notes and his homework assignments to my advantage when it came time to prepare for the tests.
- All achievable, and reflective of the information taught in the lecture.
- I missed one assignment.
- 100%, all reading and assignments, I was in class every single day as well.
- I would go to class, do the homeworks, and only sometimes read the textbook.
- All articles that he posts are very relevant to make connections with the lesson plan. His strategy is very thorough.

Student Comments:

- Professor was very engaged in class.
- The professor outlined everything, and explained it in an understandable manner.
- He was very good at communicating with the class
- This class had very clear expectations and good planning, organization, and communication on the part of professor Hwang.
- I think a reminder halfway of the syllabus and some of the teachers expectations would be beneficial to other students.
- Terry was a super nice and you could tell he cared about what he was teaching and our class understanding what he was teaching. I think just because it was his first class ever he struggled getting his exact ideas out of his head. Class often felt not helpful and i found better ways to learn the topics online. While I did enjoy his teaching, sometimes it felt as if he was learning as he was teaching. While I was able to understand most of the topics lectures where hard to follow and often I struggled staying focused. This could be just as much my problem though.
- He made it very easy by following the schedule. He never once complicated it.
- honestly this rating is more on me then him. he is one of the best prof i have ever had props to him on his first year.
- The only extra thing I wished was that the exams had a more definite curve scale.

This course helped me learn concepts or skills as stated in course objectives/outcomes.

Student Comments:

- Professor Hwang was very effective in his teaching and he explained concepts in a clear and concise manner.
- The slides were efficiently designed, and the in-person explanations were very informative.

- I already had a background in economics and knew much of the material from books, however, professor Hwang is very professional in his subject, which helped expand our knowledge on economics by having information articulated by someone who's very knowledgeable and explains the nuances of macroeconomics.
- The instructor crams a lot of concepts in each lesson plan, but he simplifies it and makes it easier for us to understand. He does an amazing job at explaining the material in the simplest way possible. I can tell he puts lots of time in his lesson plans.
- I did enjoy the course, but I would have liked to have spent a little more time on the final 1/3 of the class as that to me was the most interesting.
- I could've paid attention better to fully understand the courses so that part is on me.

Student Comments:

- The professor often asks the students to think and reflect on the material rather than just throwing it out, very good for critical thinking and understanding the material.
- This class challenges you to study and comprehend broad complex subjects, statistical relationships, and human behavior. Some of the information I learned I didn't have knowledge of initially or I had a shallow understanding of, the lectures were very articulate and provided depth of the subject matter that required critical thinking.

Student Comments:

- Went chapter by chapter, concept by concept aligning exactly with the textbook. I was never lost or confused on where we were.
- Great job for a young professor!
- I never felt lost navigating my way through this course, probably the best designed course I've taken so far at A&M.
- There could've been better structure on the slides to help us understand the logic flow better
- Overall the organization of the course was superb, it was clear that this was one of my professors first courses taught as apparent by the fact he was tweaking and adjusting the course schedule and assignments, but overall he did a great job especially for someone who is new to teaching. He was very responsive and adaptive at adjusting the course as needed while still keeping a consistent plan, which is much better than some other professors I have who have spent years in academia. You can tell he definitely tried his best.
- Canvas set up was perfect, most of my classes are too confusing

Student Comments:

- Economics is invariably tied with political opinions, and while we never got into heated political debates, students were allowed to share their different perspectives, which I found really illuminated the course material.
- I agree with this statement. Macroeconomics isn't the most complicated Econ class, yet this class had breadth and depth to understanding and mastering the complete picture of a subject in Economics that most people only understand on the surface level. He was very apolitical and objective.
- Thought that the reading of articles definitely helped here.
- The real world articles that were assigned to read were very helpful for this.

Feedback in this course helped me learn. Please note, feedback can be either informal (e.g., in class discussion, chat boards, think-pair-share, office hour discussions, help sessions) or formal (e.g., written or clinical assessments, review of exams, peer reviews, clicker questions).

Student Comments:

- Weekly assignments with multiple attempts help me see where I am standing for individual units, and prepare me for exams.
- The explanations in class were useful enough to where I didn't often find myself in need of additional feedback, but what I did receive was extremely helpful.
- I personally didn't go to office hours to get one on one feedback but the class as a whole would get feedback after exams and that was helpful.
- Overall good feedback was provided, when asked the professor helped my review questions on the exam or homework that were challenging while explaining the underlying concept so I could do better on the next exam. There wasn't a ton of feedback as other classes have due only having one professor but otherwise Hwang did a good job.
- Sometimes, I would get confused from the lecture so if the powerpoint just a tiny bit more descriptive that would help. Real world examples and metaphors were super helpful to understand concepts.
- I never attended office hours so I do not know if they would have been more beneficial then the in-class questions.

Student Comments:

- He did an exceptional job at breaking down concepts to make it easily understandable and he was fair in regards to assignments and grading
- Class was always on time and followed a similar structure which made it easy to get into a learning routine.
- Professor Hwang seemed to know what it was like to be a student, and thus didn't patronize us or underestimate us, but rather interacted with us in a way that is rare from professors. He spoke effectively, and was afraid to defer to the class for thoughts on different subjects.
- Definitely one of my favorite professors at A&M. He works very hard to do his best at teaching his class and ensuring students understand the material. He's very sociable, friendly, and helpful.
- Professor Hwang was very engaging and you could tell that he really cared about what his students were learning.
- honestly the best prof i have had at tamu.
- A very friendly and happy environment I really enjoyed it.
- He struggled to dumb some concepts down but we all appreciated his efforts
- He is awesome! You can tell her likes his job and tries very hard to help students learn.

Student Comments:

- A lot of the information was taught straight from the slides and wasn't always explained much

- Explained concepts and took time for everyone's questions to be asked. If we did not understand he would simply re-teach it again and try to help us.
- Great teacher and very passionate but would occasionally get lost in what he was trying to say
- He just read off the textbook which meant that I didn't learn anything extra during lectures.
- Terry was a great instructor, and I believe he truly enjoyed the content he taught.
- As I mentioned, he spoke very effectively, and was always ready when we had questions.
- I really liked the connection of the topics to real life using the WSJ articles.
- I took this same college course while I was in high school with a teacher who taught for twenty years. I failed that class, yet I took Taewon Hwang's class and genuinely enjoyed what I was learning and earned an A in the course. He was an exceptional professor and made me want to switch from a finance major to econ major.
- Honestly one of the best professors I've ever had. Explained previously confusing topics in an easy to understand manner.
- One of the best professors I've had in a long time, he certainly tries very hard to take care of his students. He's very receptive to students' needs and helping them if they have issues in the class. He was always kind to me and very patient.
- He would get through the content timely, but I would like better explanations of definitions and concepts.
- Thought the teaching was pretty engaging, I particularly enjoyed the last 1/3 covering the Fed.
- Made very good examples of complex ideas
- Professor Taewon was an incredible teacher this semester! You could have told me he has been a teacher for years and I would have believed you. I do think the course could benefit from the lectures being a bit more structured, sometimes there was a lot of jumping around that got confusing at times, but I absolutely see that being polished as he teaches the class more. The course overall however was set up in a very structured and approachable way, and Professor T was so kind when providing help and extra credit opportunities. I genuinely enjoyed this class a lot and found the structure very refreshing and rewarding.
- Good first-time professor, but often the homeworks and readings were sometimes unclear and concepts in class were not explained super well to most people. Moved extremely fast through concepts and hard to grasp. Very nice man and a great person who gave plenty of opportunity for extra credit.
- He was an amazing teacher with lots of potential in his future teaching career, interacting with students but the biggest thing that did make it much more difficult was his notes. Although he did provide them, they were not useful. Due to this being his first year the notes were just my biggest thing making it why it influenced 100% of scores.
- His explanations and teaching is good, I just personally function and learn better via independent study and problem solving.

Student Comments:

- Always told us to go back over the notes in the textbook and do our own research on our own intrests
- Encouraged textbook readings and further concept evaluation.
- Professor Hwang made it clear that our outside of class participation would be instrumental to our success in this course, and the information provided in the lectures never left me wanting for more. Rather, I had the information to build upon.
- kept us posted on due dates and deadlines and gave us resources to utilize.
- He gave us the tools to take responsibility
- Overall this class was less self guided than some of the other economics classes, you could do well by just attending every lecture. I will say that he encouraged us to take ownership of our learning by reading the textbook, as there were many exam questions in there you wouldn't find in the lecture.
- The instructor would encourage us to read our notes, go over slides, and look into the textbook to further understand the content.
- I thought that learning through the articles was pretty novel, they were mostly short reads but I enjoyed them and I think it was good at showing class topics in our current world.
